

Ainsworth's Hornpipe: I heard country dance bands playing this and thought it an attractive tune and arranged it for the pipes. It has to be cut down a bit but it still, I think, goes rather well.

Over the Cairn o' Mount and turning towards Drumlithie one passes this road sign to Bogjurgan, one of the farms worked by the family of the poet Robert Burns whose father left the area after the rising of 1745, bearing a note from the minister testifying that he had "taken no part in the late wicked rebellion". Bogjurgan was the birth place of John Burness (1771-1824) a second cousin of Robert
