

The Wind in the Heath

Slow Air

The Wind in the Heath: This was the title of this lovely air when I learned it as a child, and I had always thought it was an Aberdonian tune made just after the Second World War, although it may ultimately go back to the older fiddle collections.

Wind funnelling through Strathmore in Sutherland blows the head of the Alltnacailleach falls back over the shoulders of Ben Hope