

in one's youth one has learned theory if not in practice. In play "Piobaireachd," one can, therefore, it should be remembered, nevertheless, appreciate and understand the music ! In fact, to many of the very expert players the ideas of those who may not play, for the real enthusiast should not have a narrow view.

These remarks may savour somewhat of being considered in a logical and impartial way, the result of many years of work, the result of many years of work, the result of many years of work, the result of many years of work, the result of many years of work.

On this opportunity to record my good enough to write out for me and, moreover, to give me an effort, seeing that Mr. Frazer rode forty miles to obtain the find he still exhibits the steady to express my appreciation of his factorily. Had I been in much extra work.

STREET,
TTA,
e, 1926.