

FOR DONALD O

Currently only two published versions of the Piobaireachd Society's version (Page 1, Page 2) the metre is given as 4. 6. 4. against 4. 6. 4. as they contain only 14 bars instead of 16; rather pointless as it stands, with the thing of beauty it must have been the Piobaireachd Society's version, with the these notes, and with the first bar and the last bar altered as hereafter referred to—

The image shows three staves of musical notation, each representing a different version of the first bar of the ground. The staves are labeled with circled numbers 4, 8, and 12. Each staff contains a single bar of music, with notes and rests. The notation is in a traditional Scottish Gaelic style, using a single line for the treble clef and a single line for the bass clef. The notes are written in a way that suggests a specific rhythm and melody.

Original Notes in the Piobaireachd Society's version

In a Canntaireachd version of this tune the first bar of the ground reads

The image shows a single bar of musical notation, representing the first bar of the ground in a Canntaireachd version. The notation is in a traditional Scottish Gaelic style, using a single line for the treble clef and a single line for the bass clef. The notes are written in a way that suggests a specific rhythm and melody.

seems to suit the tune much better than the original. have arisen from the 5th note, D, having a grace note." (The italics are the C's)

manifestly true about this part of their

The image shows a single bar of musical notation, representing the first bar of the ground in a Canntaireachd version. The notation is in a traditional Scottish Gaelic style, using a single line for the treble clef and a single line for the bass clef. The notes are written in a way that suggests a specific rhythm and melody.

about the last half of the Second bar of the ground. In the Piobaireachd Society's version the notes in

The image shows a single bar of musical notation, representing the last half of the Second bar of the ground in the Piobaireachd Society's version. The notation is in a traditional Scottish Gaelic style, using a single line for the treble clef and a single line for the bass clef. The notes are written in a way that suggests a specific rhythm and melody.

OR DONALD OF

Abbreviations.

luth Breabach.

luth Breabach.

